

Taras Reshetukha

I started my Psychiatry residency at Queen's University in 2011 after medical school in Ukraine. From my first year at Queen's, I was offered an opportunity to explore diverse clinical settings with the full support of my supervisors. As my training progressed, my mentors supported me in running a few parallel clinics where I have gained invaluable experience that assured a seamless transition to independent practice.

Residency at Queen's helped me to refine my skills beyond clinical training. I had unlimited opportunities to apply myself to various aspects of psychiatry practice enhancing proficiency as a scholar, educator, and administrator.

Before coming to Kingston, I always wanted to work in a large city. Residency at Queen's and time spent in Kingston completely changed this perspective. My attraction to the University, the city with its people and fascinating surrounding nature grew over the years. So, my decision to settle down (personally and professionally) and become part of this community was one very natural. I have joined the Division of Acute Adult Psychiatry right after residency completion in 2016.

Choosing Queen's, you are not just choosing a residency, you are choosing an awesome lifestyle and close-knit professional community.
